

July 5, 2022

Dear Conference Delegate:

Welcome to ACWA's 2022 Washington, DC Conference. We are so pleased to be back to an in-person conference which we hope you will truly enjoy. Here in your Nation's Capital, congress is focused on the budget and the Water Resources Development Act (WRDA), and the 2022 midterm elections are just four months away.

The conference provides an opportunity to learn from our delegation and the Biden administration on such items as western drought resiliency legislation, wildfire/headwaters legislation and funding, regulatory activities, as well as, storage, recycling and drinking water issues. All of these items represent how important it is to encourage our delegation to work together to help solve California's water problems.

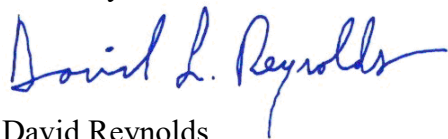

The DC Conference is an event that continues to evolve until almost the day you arrive in Washington. That said, below are a few notes on the process and itinerary during this three-day event.

With this letter, you are receiving the conference agenda, briefing book and the Tuesday Congressional Reception invitation. These materials are available attached to this e-mail should you wish to download them.

As you can imagine, security remains a priority up on Capitol Hill. Many buildings require an escort to visit congressional offices and limit visits to smaller groups.

If you have any questions regarding the conference, please feel free to contact our ACWA East Team at 202-434-4760. We look forward to welcoming you to Washington.

Sincerely,

David Reynolds
Director of Federal Relations
